INTRODUCTION

Human resources are one of the principal factors in achieving the goals of an organization (Ismail et al., 2016; Junus et al., 2016; Syam et al., 2018). Every organization needs human resources that perform well and best productivity to accomplish its goals. The attitude and actions of human resources daily are a picture of their performance that can affect the productivity of the overall organization. So, the organization needs to maintain and improve its employees’ performance to achieve the organization's goals (Rengifurwarin et al., 2018). In an organization, the existence of conflict is inevitable. In other words, conflict is always present. Therefore, conflict management needs to be conflict management because conflict is a process of interaction between two or more people or two or more groups conflicting in their opinion and purpose (Budi et al., 2015).
Each employee has creativity/thinking patterns, activities, and traits/characters that vary from one to another, so as not to close the possibility in activities or work can be found competition or clashes that cause problems for the concerned or the organization if the problem is left will affect the productivity of employees in the organization. Heridiansyah (2014), an old view that considers conflict in the organization as a negative thing, leads to organizational divisions. Therefore, it must be eliminated because it hinders optimal performance. Disputes are considered a sign of something wrong with the organization, which means the organization's rules are not enforced.

The problems faced by organizations also occur in social organizations, educational organizations, and profit-oriented organizations. Suppose the education management system is one of the main problems that cause a crisis in today's world of education due to the absence of professional education administrators (Haprabu et al., 2020; Saggaf et al., 2014; Salam, 2015). Similarly, the organization's management required a workforce that can handle a variety of problems that arise. This statement leads to effective and efficient actions that leaders will take to resolve conflicts called conflict management.

METHOD

The type of research used in this study uses quantitative research that describes and describes variable X against variable Y, where variable X is conflict management and variable Y is employee performance. To obtain data in the framework of research in the form of objective and valid data, research instruments are used that are essentially expected to be tools (1). Questionnaire, which is the main way of collecting data (primary). (2). Interviews are conducted with informants or parties who are considered to know the ins and outs of research objects. (3). Documentation, information in the form of written or printed materials, which is considered relevant and can support this research (Sugiyono, 2006). Data analysis techniques used in this study are descriptive statistical analysis techniques and inferential statistical analysis techniques that aim to examine research variables used product-moment correlation formula) (Creswell & Clark, 2017).

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

Conflict Management

Conflict management is a way that can be used by conflict parties or third parties to deal with disputes between two or more people or two or more groups to find a bright spot on the issue. Each indicator used in measuring conflict management in the office of the Regional Secretariat of Barru Regency can be seen on the table.

Data source: Processed questionnaires No. 1 – 15

Based on the calculation of conflict management in the Regional Secretariat of Barru District's office, managing conflict management amounted to 77.86% of the 100% of the total expected employee performance. From the results of the calculation on conflict management, the leadership in managing the conflict that occurred at the Office of the Regional Secretariat of Barru Regency has been running well.

The management of conflict management carried out by the Regional Secretariat of Barru Regency office is relatively good because the leadership can overcome all conflicts. When problems occur in the office, the step of the leadership and other employees is to make conflict strategy or conflict resolution by reconciling or compromising with conflicting people, through compromises made trying to resolve the conflict by finding the basis at the center of the two conflicting parties. This reduces the chances of pent-up hostility from the two conflicting sides, as no one feels victorious or defeated. However, judging from the consideration of the organization, this solution is not the best way because it does not make the best solution for the organization, just to please the two sides who are conflicting or conflicting.

Employee Performance
